Debate heats up over privacy rights as Congress compels the FAA to provide UAS access to the national air-space.

sUAS NPRM Release Date Slips Again...

According to a recent update on DOT's Rulemaking epage the projected publication date for the small Unmanned Aircraft Systems sUAS Notice of Proposed Rulemaking NPRM has been pushed back to July 2012. Though this has not yet been confirmed by the FAA Unmanned Aircraft Program Office UAPO, sources close to the office say that the rule still resides at the Office of the Secretary of Transportation OST and at this point it's anybody's guess as to when the NPRM will be published. My guess is that recent provisions in the FAA reauthorization bill in regards to the commercial and public use of UAS, as well as model aircraft, have created the need to revisit several portions of the proposed rule.
